Chapter I – Getaway
Author Note: This chapter is written from Noah's perspective.

The taxi slowly rolled to a stop in front of the hotel. We didn't really need a taxi – we didn't even leave the city – but I wanted it to feel like we had. I wanted it to feel like a real vacation. I couldn't help but stare at the building, the scenery around it. On both sides of the revolving door lay gardens filled with flowers. Roses, tulips – of all different colours. The sign above read The Scarlet Lounge. The building looked discreet, innocent even. If you didn't know what went on inside, you'd just think it was a normal hotel. I knew it wasn't.
"Can I get some help over here?" I heard Cam say from the back of the taxi.
"Oh, yeah," I answered. I quickly joined him, took some of our bags – which weren't heavy, I was just expected to serve him – and led him inside. "Welcome to our own little romantic getaway," I said as he emerged from the door. "Not bad for a student's budget, huh?" I slightly nudged him, testing the limits of the performance I was putting on. He didn't react.
He looked to the ceiling, painted regal-red, sporting a huge, ornate golden chandelier in the center. "Sure, it's flashy," he said, letting out a long breath without allowing his face to show any emotion. "I just hope the service lives up to it."
"Trust me," I answered. "I'll make sure the service is top-notch." My voice was a bit too loud, too confident. His jaw tightened – not much, but enough for me to notice.
"Careful, you're performing for an audience that doesn't even exist yet. Just focus on getting us checked in."

We walked over to the center of the lobby and stood at the front desk. "Hi there!" said the attendant as we approached. Her voice was full of chipper happiness that added a light energy into the discreetness I was aiming for. "Welcome to the Scarlet Lounge, how can I help you today?" she asked.
"We're… um… checking in," I said quietly. "Last name Harper."
"Okay, let me see if I can find that reservation. I'll need ID and a credit card please," she said before frantically typing on her computer. I got dug my driver's license and credit card from my wallet and slid them across the counter. About a minute later, she scanned them, clicked a few things on her computer, and said "I found your reservation – deluxe fantasy package, right?"
I quickly scanned the lobby out of anxiousness, hoping that nobody heard the super romantic, super kinky reservation I made for us. Luckily, everyone else in the lobby weren't anywhere near us, and those who were didn't seem to care as much as I thought they would. I mean, they were all here for the same thing we were, but I didn't see any gay couples. "Uh, yes. I also requested two fantasies for our booking, is that still available?" I asked quietly.
"Absolutely – it looks like we only have two dual experience rooms available though. We've got metro station and classroom or locker room and library. Which would you like?"

I quickly turned to Cameron, standing behind me waiting patiently. I had no idea which one to choose – I mean, I knew which one I wanted, but I didn't know what he wanted. I'll let him make that decision, I thought. It's what the submissive slave would do, right? "What do you think?" I squeaked.
"I'm not making the decision. You choose. Just know… you will be judged on your choice."
"Really? You're playing the Dom card? Right now – in the middle of a… a sex hotel?" I whispered. For some reason, I didn't want anyone around us to hear that I was the submissive one, despite how much I accepted it.
"Yes," he answered firmly, "I am. It's the perfect place, isn't it?" He chuckled quietly. "If you can't make a simple decision here, how are you going to handle what I'm going to do to you behind a locked door? You got us into this. It's your decision. I'm not making it for you."
"I like the first option more, but it's a bit… on the nose for us, don't you think?"
"Is it? Or is it just the environment you need to learn your lesson about surprising me?"

I thought about it for a few more seconds. He was sort-of right: I booked this as a surprise, and I knew my punishment was coming. I just didn't know how – or when – it would. Would it be… crossing a line? Would it… trigger him? What if… he doesn't like it? I eventually decided to go with my fantasy – getting absolutely railed in the middle of a classroom. The realism of our roles only added to the pleasure I felt. I turned back to the desk and said, "We'll take the metro station and classroom, please." My voice was full of the usual captain-of-the-hockey-team confidence, but my body – let alone my mind – wasn't as confident. I know I packed some things that would work for both, but for some reason, I was drawn to the classroom experience. Spot on for realism, but would he go for it? I hoped so. I tried to read him – his face, his body, his reaction. I couldn't get a single signal from him. I couldn't tell if I made the right decision. That… scared me.
"Perfect," she said, "People seem to really like that one. Here are your keys – your room number is inside the envelope. You'll find an info booklet for the package you booked in your room. If you use any of the perks that come with it, you'll both need to bring your keys. Have a sensual stay!"

I grabbed our keys and gave the lady at the desk a kind nod before Cam led me to the elevator around the corner. I nervously pressed the button, my hand shaking furiously. We were about to be in private, where he'd probably announce his judgement on my decision, and possibly show me how much he liked it – or didn't. The elevator made a single, short ding sound before the doors parted. We both stepped in, and he pressed the button labelled "8" as our keys were marked. The doors closed, cementing the transition from public and in front of everyone to private, only us. I could see us both in the reflective metal of the door. He stood still. Quiet. I stood next to him, nearly vibrating. My pulse was racing, my breaths shaky. As I watched the small screen on the wall change from G to 2, then to 3, I broke the silence. "That was a bit of a dick move, you know." He didn't move. He didn't say anything. He didn't react at all. The elevator beeped again, the yellow 4 on the screen piercing through the silence that drove me to madness. “Really? We’re doing… this?” I finally said, my voice showing exactly how annoyed I was, how mad his silence made me. I mean, I expected something, but I wasn’t getting anything.

“Excuse me? Is that… attitude in your voice?”
“N—no, I didn’t—"
“You’re being a brat,” he interrupted. “You meant the attitude, and you know it.”
“Okay, maybe I did mean it – but it was a dick move. You could have handled it differently.”
“You’re going to tell me how to control you, brat boy? You wanted to be the tough athlete in the lobby. You wanted to show off. Okay, fine. I let you. But when it came down to making the decision, you came crawling to me like the little submissive boy you are.” He pinned me against the elevator wall, his fingers lingering at my chin, keeping my eyes locked onto his. My back stretched over the grab bar fastened to the wall, sending a sharp pain up my spine. My grip on the bags I carried loosened to the point they just fell through my fingers. “You chose the classroom because it reminds you that I’m in charge. Since you’re so eager to return to class… perhaps your first lesson will start before we even get unpacked. Perhaps not – I don’t know yet. Now… are you going to keep up the attitude, or are you ready to apologize and have a nice, romantic getaway – the getaway you planned?”
My captain persona was completely gone, the bravado it came with… just dissolved. Somehow, he stripped it using only words. His hand released my chin, his body still pressing me hard against the wall. My eyes immediately fell to the floor, the last bit of bravado I thought I still held drained from my being. “I’m… sorry, Master,” I mumbled.
“I didn’t hear that. And you better look at me when you’re talking to me,” he barked.
I swallowed. The air stuck in my throat as if it would need more of his near-surgical precision to remove it. I slowly forced myself to look at his terrifyingly calm gaze, the weight of it only adding to my anxiousness. “I… I’m sorry for the attitude, Master,” I squeaked, my voice cracking. “Thank you for letting me choose the room.”
“Better. Good boy,” he said, giving my head a few light pats and messing my hair up. His body finally released me from the tight hold he put me in. “Now, take the bags and stay behind me. You can use the walk to the room to re-evaluate your tone.”
“Yes, Master,” I said. I lifted the bags – which felt different this time. Like an anchor keeping me in the role I desperately wanted for myself rather than a burden – something I was forced to carry. The elevator dinged, the doors opened, and we left to find our room, my eyes not moving from his legs. They were the only compass I needed, and I followed without reservation.

He held the door open for me. I walked in and set our bags on the carpet of the living area. Looking around the rest of the suite I chose, there were two bedrooms – themed just as described. One was designed like a train station, complete with a small waiting area of three small, blue bucket seats on one side, and a model of a train car on the other. The bed was made to look like the seat of the car. The windows of the room – which I could only imagine were one-way from all the dark spots on the outside of the building – played their part as the windows of the car. The natural light they let in only made the room glisten with all the cold metal covering nearly everything. On the other side of the living area, the other bedroom was designed like a small classroom. The bed was made to look like the classic teacher's desk laid at its foot. The headboard was a large, green chalkboard. A brandless box of multicolour chalk sat on the bedside table. Directly opposing it were four small student desks – the uncomfortable kind with the tiny table you could barely write on, and that you'd have to do an entire gymnastics routine just to get into or out of. The floor was laced with the standard fake spotted-marble tile of every classroom I've ever been in. The room had no windows, no natural light. We were all alone here. The rest of the city didn't exist. Only Cam's rules. Only the universe he built for us.

After we both looked around, Cam went back to the living area and sat on the couch. I sat on the other end and as he got his laptop from its case, I quietly asked, "Can you at least tell me if I made the right decision?" My voice was still small from the elevator. I couldn't find any of the confidence I once had. It disappeared, and I didn't feel it would come back any time soon.
"Oh, Noah," he said, his voice airy. "Your decision didn't matter. It never did. Either option would have served its purpose just fine."
"Then what was the point of all that – making me choose in public, putting me in my place in private – if what I chose was completely irrelevant?"
"The point, Noah, was to make you see that I don't make all the decisions. It was to make you see the consequences of your actions. You wanted to surprise me? Fine. You wanted to take the lead? Fine. I wanted you to pick the scene of your discipline. You could have been right at home in the locker room… but you picked the classroom. You picked a place where I'm naturally in charge, and you know it. You picked a place that shows exactly how little you know, and exactly how submissive you are." His voice got eerily quiet, piercing through me more than any of the 'yelling' he could do. "I didn't put you in your place, Noah. You walked right into it." His voice returned to its normal volume but took on an extremely possessive tone. "Not to mention, I love calling you a good boy as much as you love hearing it… but you've still got to earn it. You didn't earn it until you finally accepted your fate. Now, I've got to finish submitting my final grades – be a good boy until I'm done."
"Yes, Master," I said quietly, grasping the remote for the TV in front of us. I started flipping through the channels, my hand shaking. I didn't care what was on. The only thing I cared about was that I couldn't touch him. I couldn't feel the heat coming off his body. I wasn't his yet, no matter how much I wanted to be.

He worked for about an hour, occasionally shooting me a stern glance over the top of his screen, just to make sure I was still behaving. I tried to focus on the sound of the TV, but for some reason, the only thing I could hear was the quiet, rhythmic tic sound of his keyboard. Every time the sound stopped, every time his body twitched, every time his eyes shot in my direction, a shiver went through my entire body. My heart tremored. My breathing skipped. I put on as much of a good boy show as I possibly could for him. Once he returned to his work, I let out a breath, my heart still pounding out of my chest. When he finally finished, he meticulously put the computer back in its case and began watching the TV with me. I wanted him to do something. I needed to feel him – even if he didn't touch me. I needed to feel his dominance. I needed him to acknowledge that I still existed. I craved it. I slowly shifted from sitting on the opposite end of the couch to laying across it. My feet carefully made their way into his lap. I saw his eyes instantly fall before returning to the screen. "You seem… awfully comfortable for someone who was just shaking in an elevator, Noah," he said, his voice terrifyingly calm. He looked to my feet once more, then ordered, "Lose the socks, jock. Nice and slow. I want to see those sweet, soft, bright pink soles of yours. Think of it as a reward for both of us. I finished my work, and you've been a good boy since we got settled."

I followed his order, pressing one of my knees to my chest and slowly peeling the sock off. I let it sit at the middle of my arch just to tease him a bit before peeling it the rest of the way. I did the same for the other foot, teasing him by slowly revealing the soft skin beneath the cloth covering it. I slowly hovered them over him, just out of his reach, until the heat piercing through his jeans warmed my bare soles. I saw how his jeans became tighter as he watched me shed the fabric from my feet. I knew he saw me notice it, but he didn't move. He didn't say anything. He just waited for me to finish obeying him. "You didn't strip them just to leave them hanging in the air, did you? You think you're being cute, keeping them from me, teasing me with their deliciousness?" His voice lowered to a terrifying growl; his eyes focused on the display I made for him in the air. "I know you're begging for my hands. I know you're going crazy for my touch. Be the little foot slut slave boy I know you are and hand them over. Let me use them however I want. I want to play," he demanded. His focus was finally on me. The tingles came back, radiating all through my body. They were different this time – not just sexual energy. They told me he finally saw me. They released the intense craving I had to be touched. They meant I was finally going to get the attention I so desperately wanted.
"Of course, Master," I answered, sliding my bare soles back to his lap, right over his cock, hugging the tension I noticed immediately prior.
"Good boy," he said, his voice deep with indulgent satisfaction, yet still showing his authority over me. "One more thing. Don't you dare make a sound. This is my time."

It started innocent. He started carefully rubbing my feet, using the perfect amount of pressure; not too hard or too soft. It was just enough so I could feel it and feel good at the same time. I stayed silent, but inside… I was already feeling so good. My toes naturally tensed up every time he pressed into the ball of my foot. It didn't hurt; it still felt like absolute heaven. I guess he activated just the right muscle to get my toes to have a mind of their own and disobey the feelings my brain was sending throughout the rest of my body. Then, it got a bit more intense. He went from massaging my feet to softly kissing them. Each peck careful, coordinated, like he had a GPS roadmap to my feet and their pleasure centers. He did tell me that he understood the nervous system, and he did use it to give me the best massage of my life. Maybe he knew just as much about how to make someone feel good through their feet. Every peck sent a tickling buzz all around my body. For the first few, I shook because of the sensation, but I eventually got used to it and figured out how to channel it into excitement. My toes finally relaxed as he kissed all the muscles. I could feel my heart racing by that point. It wanted to jump out of my chest because of the pleasure he built up inside me.

Then, he turned up the heat even more. His light kisses slowly turned into short licks that once again sent pleasure tingles through my body. I wondered if he knew – if he noticed my tiny flinches, and if he knew they were because of how good he made me feel rather than how scared I was of him. He didn't say anything, and I forced myself to stay silent, just as he commanded, despite how much I wanted to moan out. Something inside of me knew that he picked up the signals my body was somewhat voluntarily giving him, and that he knew what they meant. The cool air of the room shocked my arches every time his tongue left my skin. The new cool only intensified the heat of his next stroke, making it feel twice as good as the last. I tried to focus on the subtle scratching sensation of his tongue as it grazed my sensitive soles, and the occasional slurps he would make between licks. They grounded me – they made it sound like he finally knew I existed. That he finally claimed me as his. The strokes got longer, deeper, and much faster. My heart started beating even harder, even faster. My breath began to catch. My body shivered in pure pleasure. He often took some time to focus on my toes, wrapping his lips around them and ever so carefully sucking on them, massaging them softly with his tongue. He effortlessly switched between the two sensations with that same precision I've come to know from him. The same precision I've come to love receiving, whenever he'd give it to me.

After some time – exactly how much I couldn't say – he gave my arches one last kiss before he stopped. I leaned further into the cushions, finally satisfied that I had some nice contact from him. My chest rose and fell quickly, my breath deep. The room felt smaller, warmer than it did before. Yet… I still craved more. "Wow…" I breathed. "You're getting really good at reading me. You knew I craved your touch. You did what I wanted you to do. You… made me… melt." He didn't pull away. He gently held my legs in the air, resting his cheek on my exposed feet and allowing himself to indulge in their scent. Every few seconds, he'd tilt his head slightly and plant a short, loving kiss somewhere on their sensitive skin, sending another tickle shock through my body. "It's not hard to anticipate you when you want the same thing I do, Noah." His gaze was soft and sensual. It was missing its controlling sharpness. His voice stripped of the harsh bark from the elevator. The Master was gone, leaving only the heavy, loving affection that came with his usual demeanor. It reminded me why I trusted him with my body and my life. He wasn't in charge, ordering me around anymore. He was taking care of me. He knew he needed to care for me. That's why I trust him. That's why I let him control me. He knows when I need him to be firm – when to exert control, and when to stay soft – when to care for me. "We're just in sync. That's why this works," he said.

I could barely feel the couch under me, the heat of his body under my feet. Everything felt like I was laying on a soft cloud, being propped up by the satisfying weight of his approval. My heart was still pounding, my chest still fluttering as my breaths started returning to normal. He carefully reached for the leaflet that sat on the table next to him. “Let’s see what you got us into, shall we?” he asked, setting my legs back on his lap. I slowly switched sides, taking his invitation to cuddle up to him. My naked feet, still buzzing with pleasure, rested on the arm opposite our meshed bodies. The same arm my head had just rested on. They longed for more of his touch as my upper body met his. He gazed through the laminated paper, his eyes darting back and forth. “The deluxe fantasy package includes unlimited access to the care centre, private sauna suite and the couples’ massage parlor during your stay,” he started reading.
“That sounds nice, doesn’t it?” I asked.
“It does, but I’m not done yet. The mini fridge in your room has been stocked with a free bottle of house champagne.”
“See… how romantic!”
“Yeah, yeah, I get it. You’re a romance guru,” he teased. “Present your room key in the in-house restaurant for a discount on your meal and a free dessert.”
“Ooh, that sounds nice…” I mumbled.
“And what’s this?” he playfully asked. “Special for the classroom fantasy… access to the principal’s paddle in the top drawer of the desk. I’ll have to remember that.”

He put the paper back on the table and let me cuddle up to him even more. I leaned into his ear and asked, “How about we use that sauna and massage?”
“I think that’s a good idea,” he answered.
“But first… I want to pay you back for what you did for me.” I dropped my voice to a low whisper and asked, “Care for a train ride, lover boy?”
“Eager, aren’t we? You want to be of service before we get nice and pampered?” he asked.
“Yes, Master, please. I want to earn my good boy title. You made me feel good; I should make you feel even better.”
His eyes darkened. His face grew the smallest of commanding smiles. He gained just a bit of his Master energy back. “In that case, show me how much you want it. Show me how good of a boy you are. Prove you’re the best slave boy that ever existed, and maybe you’ll earn it. Lead the way, brat,” he agreed, still teasing my decision to put on a performance. He could tease it all he wanted… I didn’t regret it – I still don’t, and I never will.
