Chapter K – Using the Love Hotel
Author Note: This chapter is written from Noah's perspective.

The second day of our booking wasn't very eventful. I mean, we had our fair share of make-out sessions, and I definitely let him feel me up a few times, but that's about as spicy as it got… at least, so far. He hasn't punished me yet. Our reservation was just for the weekend, so it's coming today. I know it. I made us a reservation for dinner in a little while, so it was time I prepared. While I got out all the parts of my outfit, I had a revelation. Everything he told me in the elevator, everything he barked at me when we got into the room… was right. I did choose the classroom because he was in charge. I was sure class would be in session tonight, and I was sure that I wanted to be in attendance – badly. It's a good thing I packed the perfect outfit for the role I was going to play – his perfect little femboy schoolboy. I had to make sure I looked the part, so I went all out. My top was a sharp, brilliant white collared button-up shirt. The fabric felt nice and crisp on my skin. I didn't want to get dress-coded, so all the buttons were done up, like a true school uniform. A bright red tie hung from my neck, firmly knotted against my throat, and covered by the navy-blue blazer that gave my outfit the elite prep school look. From the waist up, at least.

The real fun came from what was below the table. I wore a blue-and-red plaid skirt that sat no higher than my mid-thigh, just long enough to cover the parts I reserved especially for him. I decided not to wear anything underneath it. It'll be a good surprise for him, and nobody in the restaurant would be looking up there, so nobody else would see it. To get him going even more, my legs sported a pair of sheer thigh-highs that matched my blazer. They featured delicate, subtle white bows pointing outwards along the thigh hem. My smooth, toned legs were barely visible as an off-white haze through the stretch of the fabric. I knew that would be one of the highlights of the outfit. My feet – which were also a barely visible haze emerging from the socks – were hidden from the rest of the restaurant, covered by a modest pair of shiny black shoes. I was saving that view for later, for when we were in private. To bring the whole aesthetic together, I carefully positioned a navy-blue beret on the left side of my head, slightly tilted to get the perfect cuteness I was after. I finished off the look by pinning a small, bright-red bow in my hair, right above my right eye. I opened the closet and stared at myself in the mirror. Absolutely perfect, I thought as a soft, yet still completely mischievous smile crept across my face. I thought I looked like the perfect mix of sharp and strikingly cute. He'll love it.

"Really?" I heard from the doorway. "You're wearing… that to dinner?" I quickly turned around, my feet slipping in my shoes, sending a light, tickling shock up my spine. Cam stood at the door, leaning on the doorjamb. He looked me up and down, his face growing its signature smirk; the one that says I'm claiming this as mine.

COPYRIGHT © 2026 by Johnny Console. All Rights Reserved.
No parts of this work may be reproduced without prior written permission of the author.

“Yeah,” I started, my voice full of its usual jockey confidence. “It wouldn’t make sense for me to wear something else to dinner, only to come back and change into this for you, only to have you tear it off me. I thought I’d just cut out the middle step and stick with this.”
“How… insightful of you,” he slowly said. His tone suggested that he didn’t believe I could ever have an idea like that… let alone one that made sense logically. He entered the room and slowly walked to me. He carefully supported the back of my head with his hand and continued, “How… well-reasoned. How… efficient,” he said, maintaining his slow speed and his commanding presence. He leaned into me, tightened his grip on my hair, and whispered – his tone low and full of a sudden erotic heat, “I like seeing that in a student.”
I leaned in closer, his hand still glued to my head, and whispered “Oh, really? Why don’t you show me how much you like it?”
“After dinner, Noah. You can brainstorm all you want about it while you’re sitting like a good little boy for me… if you can distract yourself from the fear of your punishment. Got it, brat boy?”
“Yes, Master… but can I maybe get… a little bit? Just a kiss? Please?” I begged quietly. I let some water build up in my eyes, making it look like I was about to burst into tears because of his denial.
“Oh, alright. I don’t like seeing you so forlorn. You can have a kiss,” he said as he leaned into my face and planted his lips onto mine. His arms embraced me with the usual warmth they gave. We stood there for a minute or so, before he suddenly stopped and said, “That’s all you get, you’ll have to wait for more. Now, grab your key and let’s go… we’ve got a table to catch.”
I followed him just as I had when we first stepped off the elevator – but this time, my step was quick with the building anticipation of what was coming, rather than slow and deep from being put in my place. My feet still slid in my shoes with a teasing slickness that only made the feelings I had bubble up even more.

He led me into the dining room – just as red as the lobby, the dim light reflecting off the shiny white tile floor. I could see the endless rows of round tables small and large holding their guests. Somehow, despite it looking completely packed, there was still plenty of room to move around. The light hum of dinner music filled the air, setting the ambiance of quiet, comfortable warmth. We approached the dark walnut host stand that sat right inside the door. Cam pushed me in front of him, almost as if he wanted me to get our table, just like he did when we checked in. I slowly turned my head to look at him, terrified that’s what he wanted. His eyes met mine with an expression that I can only describe as… you do it, brat. My gaze quickly moved to the host at the stand, and I quietly asked for our reservation. “Are you hotel guests?” the host asked, his voice soft and welcoming.
“Yes, we are,” I said, showing my key card.
The host quickly peered at mine and Cam’s hands, before he continued. “Okay, good – you’re entitled to a discount on your meal.”
“How did you know just from looking? Don’t you need to swipe it?” I asked.

COPYRIGHT © 2026 by Johnny Console. All Rights Reserved.
No parts of this work may be reproduced without prior written permission of the author.

“Not yet – We’ll need to swipe it when you order to apply the discount. Our reservation packages have unique keys. Yours is bordered in red, which means you have the deluxe package.”
“Interesting,” I said slowly.
“Your table is ready, right this way.”

He led the two of us through the maze of tables, effortlessly dancing through the floor to avoid the servers. Our table, somewhere in the middle of the floor, was draped in a red tablecloth. On top lay a strip of white fabric and our place settings. A small vase sat in the center, holding two roses: one red and one white. To the right of my plate was a bundle of cutlery wrapped in a black cloth napkin, secured by a red ribbon tied in a cute little bow. The host pulled out a chair for me and motioned for me to sit down. Cameron took his seat opposite me as I gracefully settled in place. The host gently pushed my chair into place before he laid two thin cloth-covered menus in front of us.
“Care for any drinks to start?” he asked.
“We’ll do two glasses of your house red,” Cameron answered. I’m not one for red wine, but I won’t oppose it. I wouldn’t dare to anyways – I was already slated for a punishment; I didn’t need it any worse.
“I’ll have your server bring those to you while she’s taking your order.”
“Thank you,” we both said. The host gave us a small nod before returning to his stand.

Cameron quickly snatched the menu from in front of me. “I’ll order for you,” he murmured.
“But you—”
“I know what you like, Noah,” he interrupted. “Trust me – I’m not going to disappoint you.”
“Alright, I guess… if you say so.”
“Do… you want me to say it?” he asked.
“Please.”
“Good boy,” he whispered. Hearing it sent a small smile across my face. We hadn’t even seen our server yet and I was already aflutter. Maybe it was just the ambiance. Maybe it was him taking control and caring for me at the same time. Maybe it was both, or something else entirely. In any case, I loved it. About ten minutes later, our server arrived. Her uniform, matching the deep red and black of the dining room fit tight against her body. She carried a small, plastic tray holding two overly huge glasses of deep, ruby-red wine.
“Good evening, gentlemen,” she addressed us, carefully placing one glass in front of each of us. “My name is Elena, and I’ll be your server today. Do you need a bit longer with the menus?” she asked.
“No – we’re ready,” Cameron said. He didn’t even look at me. His focus stayed on the glistening pages of the menu. It was like I didn’t exist all over again. “We’ll share a taco salad in the tortilla bowl to start. For our mains, he’ll have the spaghetti bolognese,” he started. I felt my chest get tight. My hands squeezed the tablecloth. “But can we get that with a bit less sauce?” He… remembered. He knew I didn’t like my pasta drenched in sauce. I mentioned it to him once or twice when we went out to eat, but I never expected him to remember it. It made me feel warm and cozy, and all the tension I held instantly faded. It's a small thing, but just hearing him remember made me feel seen, like he never forgot about me in the first place.

COPYRIGHT © 2026 by Johnny Console. All Rights Reserved.
No parts of this work may be reproduced without prior written permission of the author.

"Absolutely, I'll let the kitchen know," she responded, writing everything on the small pad she held in her hand.
"And, for yourself, sir?"
"I'll do the crispy chicken, extra crispy please, with the garlic cheese mash as a side," he confidently said, handing the menus over.
"Excellent choices, I'll get those started for you."

We sat there for about a minute, completely still, completely silent. "You… remembered," I whispered, breaking the moment.
"Of course I did. I know you," he answered, reaching one hand across the table and picking up his glass with the other. I reached for his hand with mine and took a small sip of the wine. The bitterness sent a wave through my entire body. I couldn't help but shake in my seat.
"Not a fan?" he asked.
"It's… strong," I answered. "It's a bit dry for my taste – I usually go for white."
"Drink it anyway," he ordered. "Think of it as preparation for later tonight; I want you to learn how to take anything I give you without complaining."
My head dropped at his reminder of my punishment. Another shock went through my spine; another bout of tremors surged through my skin. "Yes, Sir," I quietly answered.
"Hey – look at me, Noah," he said, just as quietly. I forced my head up and stared right into his eyes, like I was taught. He squeezed my hand and continued. "You can drop the act – we're in public, it's okay. You've been quite the handful these past couple of days," he said, swirling his glass around. "But you're behaving so well, so beautifully for me right now. Keep it up, and I might soften your punishment."
"Do you ever take it easy on me?" I asked, my voice full of deviant sarcasm.
"Only when I can make you beg for it," he answered as a dangerous smile slowly appeared on his lips.

Shortly after, the appetizer was ready. It sliced right through the tension and brought us back together for the reason we were there in the first place – a romantic dinner. We shared the salad like the two lovebirds we were. I loved it – it was the perfect mix of spicy, salty, soft and crunchy. Cameron kept the conversation oddly light. I wasn't sure if my tremors were the cause, or if he just didn't want to keep up the ruse, but I took it. We talked about the one course I told him about, my family – since I wouldn't dare to bring up his after what happened that night – and other innocent things like that. He made sure my posture was perfect as I ate every bite of my lightly sauced pasta without spilling a drop of the bright red sauce on my uniform. I had to stay completely perfect for him. He even let me try some of his mash when I said it looked good – and boy, was it ever. Before I knew it, it was finally time for dessert. Elena approached our table and laid a medium-sized dish between the two of us, spinning it with a well-practiced flourish. “For dessert, the house specialty: our molten lover’s cake.” I looked at the heart-shaped cake, covered in a firm and glistening dark chocolate crust. The dusting of fine, red sugar sparkled even more in the dimly lit dining room. It looked like a total love hotel gimmick, but I couldn’t help but swoon over it anyway. I quickly picked up the small spoon that still laid on my side of the table. To my surprise, so did Cameron.

COPYRIGHT © 2026 by Johnny Console. All Rights Reserved.
No parts of this work may be reproduced without prior written permission of the author.

“Since you’re the romance guru,” he teased softly. The crust let out a quiet crack as he tapped his spoon to break it and scooped up a decent helping. The thick, steamy chocolate center slowly spilled onto the plate as he lifted it, blowing gently to cool it off, and held it towards me. “Let me show you how romantic I can be.” I leaned in, taking the spoon in my mouth. It was incredible – moist, rich, and ever-so-chocolatey, the residual heat making it even better. “Sweet, isn’t it?” he asked.
“Yeah,” I breathed, trying to cool my mouth. “It’s really good.”
“Yes, it is,” he murmured quietly, taking a bite for himself. He leaned across the table, blocking out the rest of our surroundings until he was the only thing in my view. “But… it’s a bit redundant.”
“Redundant?” I asked, pausing to take another scoop of the decadent cake in my mouth. I was curious about how he could call the sweet end to our romantic dinner redundant. I know I’m just a dumb jock, but that didn’t seem like the right word at all.
“Redundant. I don’t need a cake to give me something rich and sweet, Noah. I’ve got you for that.” Without breaking his laser-focused gaze, he slowly scooped himself another portion and popped it in his mouth. For less than a second, his gaze fell to my lap and exposed legs. I could feel the desire he had in his expression to get access to everything else that was just barely out of view. It pierced through me, looking almost predatory. I could tell he wanted me to himself. Now.
“I plan to get much deeper into you than a spoon could ever go into this cake. I’m going to make you completely dissolve for me,” he whispered. “I’m going to taste exactly how much you’ve been craving me since I had you pinned against the wall in that elevator.”

Woah. He did not just say that. The spoon slipped out of my fingers and hit the floor with a sharp ping that echoed throughout the rest of the dining room. It felt like conversations around us just stopped. I was convinced that every tiny movement, every gaze from any of the tables around us was a sharp judgement, focused on me. I felt like the center of attention… and not in the good way. A sudden, relentless thud returned to my chest. My breath became shallow. My mouth froze open as the shocking supercharged heat of his words completely paralyzed me like nothing else ever had.
“You know what… the kitchen can keep the rest of this,” he murmured quietly in my ear after slipping me one last taste. His eyes were full of a primal passion that had absolutely nothing to do with food, and absolutely everything to do with my body. “I want something else for dessert. Something they can’t make me. I want you, and I’m going to take every little bit of you for

COPYRIGHT © 2026 by Johnny Console. All Rights Reserved.
No parts of this work may be reproduced without prior written permission of the author.

myself until you're shaking and begging for me to stop. Then, I'm going to pleasure you so much until you just completely unravel in my arms, you sweet, ruined brat."
"Dah…Wha—Wow… that's, uh…" I stuttered uncontrollably.
"What? You don't believe me, schoolboy? You think I'm lying? You don't believe I can punish you for your surprise and still unravel your entire being while pleasuring you?" he asked. His voice was much sharper, as if I insulted him. It still carried the effortless authority that completely overshadowed my usual jockey confidence, a tone that could make me fall to my knees for him in an instant. And he knew that.

He signalled for the waiter and told him to charge our meal to the room. He quickly got up from his seat and walked around the table until he was right next to me. "Why don't you come back to the room with me… right now… and feel it for yourself, hmm? I think you have a detention to serve, boy, and I don't think your teacher would like it if you were late," he quietly barked. He reached his hand out to me – and I quickly took it. He whisked me away through the restaurant. The speed made my skirt lift a bit – not enough to catch me an indecent exposure charge, but it was close. Close enough to make my body shake with the pure adrenaline I usually only felt on the ice. I used my free hand to press the rough, pleated fabric firmly against my body. I felt the weight of every gawk and gaze as we raced away from the low murmur of the dining room and into the deathly quiet hallway. The only sound was the rhythmic tac-tac-tac of my shoes hitting the floor with every step. It rang in my head like a countdown to what I'd been waiting for all weekend. The waves of embarrassment finally dampened when we finally made it to the warmth of our room. That warmth would soon change to a deep ambiance of punishment and pure pleasure.

Cam twisted the latch on the door as it snapped shut, the deep, heavy click only sent an intense tremor of pure anticipation right through me. We were in private now. It was just us. Nobody else. The pressure, the forced agony as I waited for my punishment was finally at its breaking point, and I felt like I was on the edge of one hell of an explosion.
"You've been a bad boy, and it's time for your punishment. Get in there, brat!" he ordered. I mindlessly obeyed. He sat at the desk at the foot of the bed and motioned for me to take my place at the pupil's desk directly in front of it. "It's time for me to teach you your lesson. You better be ready to learn," he barked.
"Yes, S—Sir, I'm ready," I answered, my voice carrying a sharp, breathless edge. I carefully stepped into the classroom.
"Hey!" he yelled as he sat at the commanding teacher's desk. "No shoes in the classroom."
My head instantly fell to the ground out of embarrassment. I murmured, "Yes, Sir," and kicked off my shoes, the micro-thin layer of blue sheer fabric revealing every detail of my legs and feet.
"Well… someone's trying to impress me. But showing me your pretty little jock feet won't get you out of detention." he sneered as I stepped into the room. His gaze didn't leave my feet as I walked towards his desk. "Good… now that you're following the rules, we can get started." He rose, walking around the desk to start pacing. “You decided to build me an admittedly nice and romantic getaway.” He turned on his heel with military-like speed and precision. “But… you also know I absolutely hate surprises.” He turned once again, facing me head-on, his angry gaze staring right into my soul. “Now, why would you do that if you know I wouldn’t like the surprise, hm?” he asked sharply, demanding an answer that I didn’t have.

COPYRIGHT © 2026 by Johnny Console. All Rights Reserved.
No parts of this work may be reproduced without prior written permission of the author.

“I—I don’t know, I thought it would be a nice end to your term,” I sheepishly murmured, my head bowing under the intense weight of his stare.
He stopped directly in front of me, bending over my desk until he was in my face. “Typical jock, making stupid decisions without having a good reason.” He clicked his tongue in a slow, rhythmic scold, shaking his head. The sound sent shivers through my entire body. He made it feel like he was genuinely disappointed in me – even though I knew he wasn’t. It triggered a sudden, deeply ingrained instinct to submit, which only forced more helpless tremors throughout my entire being. “For the first part of your punishment, you’re going to write some lines on the board. Write ‘I will not surprise my Master’ until I tell you to stop.”

“Yes, Sir,” I said quietly as I climbed onto the bed to face my punishment. I picked up a piece of white chalk from the box on the table. I set it on the board with the usual soft tic sound echoing through my brain. That sound, together with the soft scratch as the chalk glided across the board, became the deeply satisfying rhythm of my fate. It resonated as I made every stroke. I finished the first line, ‘I will not surprise my Master’ and quickly looked to him for approval. The look that met my eyes was anything but approving. Quite the opposite, by what he said next.
“Now, now… Is that the best you can do? That looks like a ten-year-old wrote it. I expect my students to put some effort into their work. Got it?”
“Y—yes Sir,” I answered. I lifted the eraser to try again, but he stopped me.
“Ah-ah-ah, leave it. Just do better. Let it be a reminder to you about what not to do.”
“Yes, Sir.” I went back to writing, making sure to make every stroke straight, exactly where it belonged. I finished the line again, ‘I will not surprise my Master’.
From behind me, I heard him say, “Better, good boy.” His tone was still strict and controlling, yet the tiny hint of approval made a small smile sprout across my lips.

I kept writing for what felt like hours, even though the large, round clock on the wall only showed five minutes had passed. My hand was coated with a thick layer of white dust, and I felt a throbbing cramp from holding the narrow chalk so tightly without any breaks. Suddenly, he interrupted. “I think that should be enough,” he said. “Time for the second part of your punishment. Get down here and bend over my desk, you little brat boy,” he ordered. The smile instantly faded from my face, replaced with a deep, agonizing heat in my core as I scrambled off the bed to obey. I faced myself towards the board, staring at my work and able to see the forbidden teacher’s side of the desk. I planted my hands on the cold wooden surface, leaving two very distinct, stark handprints on its dark surface. I held my breath, eagerly prepared for everything that was coming my way. He opened the top drawer with an agonizing slowness,

COPYRIGHT © 2026 by Johnny Console. All Rights Reserved.
No parts of this work may be reproduced without prior written permission of the author.

giving me the deep sense of impending doom I needed to feel. What he pulled from the darkness sent another shiver straight down my spine: the thick, wooden paddle. He used it on his hands a couple of times, letting the deep smack echo through the room. I winced at the sound, letting out a faint, fearful whimper as my fingers curled around the edge of the desk, the rest of my body tensing up. The heavy silence returned, broken only by the steady ticking of the clock.

"Since you're all about surprises," he said, his tone dangerously low and ominous, "let me give you one." He carefully lifted the skirt, completely exposing my bare skin. I heard a quiet woosh as he lifted the paddle away from me and quickly let it contact my exposed ass.
Crack.
An intense shockwave radiated from my tailbone all the way through to the top of my head. My fingers clenched the desk even harder, the sharp edge digging further into my skin as the white-hot sting bloomed. "Ah," I gasped, my chest quickly heaving.
"That was for the sloppy writing. You get five more for the surprise. Count them out, jock boy."
"One… Sir," I struggled to choke out.
Whack.
"Two, Sir."
Whack.
"Three, Sir," I barely managed to get out. By now, the sting was so intense, it was stealing every drop of air from my lungs.
Whack.
"Four, Sir."
Whack.
"Five…" I paused, trembling so violently as I tried to find my voice. He waited in the silence, letting the heat build until I finally acknowledged him. "… Sir," I eventually squeaked, tears filled with pure sensory overload slowly slipping down my face.
Whack.

"There. You're nice and red back there," he said, slamming the paddle on the desk right next to my hand, causing my voice to let out a small, scared whimper, and my body to shake out of instinct. He rubbed my now bright-red ass, the sharp, stinging burn still lingering deep in the muscle. His slow, heavy rubbing dulled the sting but drew out the ache. "Now for the last part of your punishment. The part I'm most looking forward to. The part you've been waiting for the entire weekend to get. Time for you to earn some extra credit. You're going to let me use that twinky jock body of yours however I want, got it?"
I looked over my shoulder at him, ass red-hot, knees weak, eyes just as red. I forced the slightest of whispers, "Y—yes, Sir, my body is yours to play with."

COPYRIGHT © 2026 by Johnny Console. All Rights Reserved.
No parts of this work may be reproduced without prior written permission of the author.